Republican Silver Program.

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, has introduced a bill in the Congress of the United States having for its object the levying of an import tax on silver bullion and unmanufactured silver. The Senator believes that the passage of the bill will enhance the price of silver in the markets of the United States. In this connection it appears that the United States will be in the market as a purchaser within a year. There remains but a little over forty millions of uncoined silver in the treasury and this is being coined into dollars and subsidiary coins at the rate of 22,000,000 annually. Of late years the demand for silver has grown apace and the government willingly, or unwillingly, will have to supply this demand. And again, there is a growing sentiment in favor of the retirement of all treasury notes and national bank currency below ten dollars. Was this done it would create a demand for silver that would force the price of the metal to one dollar or more per ounce. As the product of Mexico and other silver producing countries would be excluded under the Penrose bill American miners and mine owners would receive the benefits of this legislation. In the last national campaign it was alleged by republican managers that when conditions were ripe silver would be taken care of in a way that established business interests would not be effected. In conformity with this program the Penrose bill may be expected to become a law of the land.

Copper in Russia.

The Mining Journal of London prints the following, taken from the Promyshlenniki, Mir:

"At the beginning of the nineteenth century Russia supplied most of northern Europe with copper. Her sixty smelting works then issued 200,000 pounds (the pound is 35 pounds avoirdupois) per annum. The copper discoveries elsewhere led to many of the Russian works being shut down. However, the high price of copper of late years has stimulated production again, and in the last decade the yield of pure copper, beginning at 174,000 pounds in 1891, fell to 145,000 in 1894, rose to 190,000 in 1897, dropped again to 158,000 in 1898, then rapidly progressed to 236,000 in 1900. It would appear that as regards copper, Russia is practically virgin, only the upper veins having been worked, and the Ural range is said to be very rich. Russia uses 1,000,000 pounds of copper per annum and imports 75 per cent of such requirement."

The Tombstone Prospector mentions as a news item, that twenty five or thirty ostriches would be kept on a farm near Phoenix. It alleged the height of the birds at fifteen feet each. This story evidently exceeds the birds in height.

Coughs and Colds in Children.
